GREEN TIP

Peat moorlands are important sinks for carbon and we are blessed with a large number across the U.K. However many have been severely damaged, some because the peat has been extracted for compost or for fuel. The good news is that only peat-free bagged compost can now be sold in our shops. However professional growers can still use peat-based compost for their plants for another 4 years. When buying plants try to ensure that the soil they are growing in is peat-free.
