GREEN TIPS

This is the time of year when we are all thinking about summer holidays, but how is it possible to have a good summer break without damaging the environment? Globally, tourism makes up about 9% of global greenhouse gas emissions so the way we take holidays is important.

The lowest impact holiday is obviously a staycation. Staying at home and opting for days out by bus, train or cycling and having meals out in local restaurants or cafes can save energy and money. You are also boosting your local economy.

Secondly holidaying by bus, train, bicycle or car in the U.K. has less environmental impact than flying and can give a boost to the British hospitality industry.

You don't need to fly to go abroad. It won't be cheaper but travelling by train or car to destinations in Europe certainly cuts down emissions. Think carefully about your choice of destination there are a number of travel companies dedicated to offering hotels, B&Bs and homestays that limit the impact they have on the environment. Eco-tourism is growing so look carefully at your options when booking.
